

Contact Julianna Shapiro
Telephone 949.613.5044
Email media@chronicallyawesome.org
Website www.chronicallyawesome.org

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
January 15, 2016

CHRONICALLY AWESOME DEBUTS NEW WEBSITE

Aliso Viejo, CA, January 15, 2016— Five years ago, The Chronically Awesome Foundation released its first website. The first site was an introduction to a new and different chronic illness community, one that did not silo illnesses, one that encouraged a community of chronically ill artists to submit blogs and other art so that the act of creativity might help to lessen the symptoms of illness.

“We wanted to tell the chronically ill that they could become Chronically Awesome, and I wanted to share how I had found peace with my own condition by adding simple, positive steps to my life.” Says Jules Shapiro, founder of The Chronically Awesome Foundation

Needing to keep up with changes in web technology, Chronically Awesome teamed up with Scott Gray to develop the new Chronically Awesome site. The site still focuses on blogging and other calls for artistic works from the community but has the infrastructure to provide condition based support to visitors. This new site also allows the foundation to work with partner organizations ON the site. The first partner will be announced shortly.

The Chronically Awesome Foundation is a fiscally sponsored 501c3 whose mission it is to cultivate and support the Chronically Awesome Community through artistic programs including but not limited to blogging, photography, painting, and crafting; as well as to provide support programs both in a group or peer-to-peer settings. The Chronically Awesome Foundation strives to educate and raise awareness about the needs of the Chronically Awesome. We provide comfort to those in need and give back to The Chronically Awesome Community in creative and uplifting ways.

###

If you would like more information about this topic, please contact Julianna Shapiro at 949.613.5044 or email at media@chronicallyawesome.org.